

they are very sorry for the outrage which was committed on his carriage, and he in return tells them, that he is very glad that they are so very sorry. This outrage enables the ministry to appeal to those very passions that the opposition have appealed to with so much success. And it probably will be proved that those very men who blistered their hands by clapping applause to orator Hunt some time since, when he intimated that the prince regent's head if taken from his shoulders, would not compensate for the miseries of his government, will be the loudest in their demonstrations of loyalty and of attachment to the government of the prince. Our papers have for a long time past been loaded with the speeches and addresses of those orators, who have represented England as on the very threshold of ruin, by the profligacy and corruption of the ministers. We must now be prepared to hear, and perhaps from the same men, how much happiness and prosperity the nation have enjoyed under this dynasty, the glory she has gained, and self compliments in all their charming varieties.

Indeed it may well be doubted whether the most profligate and corrupt ministry would not exist in any commotions of the people that ended in insurrections and mobs. They then gain an accession of strength from all the men of property in the kingdom. Men of fortune, when they see to what plunging lengths such characters will go, set their faces against the reformation of any abuses whatever; they will yield nothing, when if any thing is yielded, it ends in turbulence and riot—ministers will in this manner be able to shelter their own enormities, under the turbulence which the extirpation of such enormities would excite. There is a certain species of fish, denominated the scutell-fish, that lies close to the bottom of the river and conceals himself in congenial mud—When he is pursued, he is able to darken the transparent element by his own exertions, under which, there is a possibility of his making his escape. But if the detecting hand raises the muddy sediment to the summit, the fish will to a dead certainty escape. He has not only his natural pollution for protection, but the pollution raised by the benevolence of his antagonist, also.

NEW-YORK, APRIL 14.

Science and Defence.—In this State, exclusive of this city, there are five thousand common schools, patronised by the State, in which upwards of two hundred thousand children are instructed in the rudiments of science. The annual expense about 65,000 dollars.—the organized Militia of this State comprises 106,880 men—of which 97,639 are infantry, 6,434 artillery, and 2,807 cavalry. The Assembly of this State has passed a Resolution for the substitution of Banishment, for confinement in the State Prison, and that the punishment of the persons returning from banishment before the expiration of their sentences, shall be death. There are islands in the South Sea, which are considered American, and to which the project of sending them thither would not appear more impracticable than that at first did of sending the British convicts to Botany Bay.

MORE SPANISH MISCONDUCT.

Capt. Fanning of the ship Volunteer, reports, that while on a voyage in the Pacific Ocean, he put into Copiapo [a port of the Spanish South-American province of Chili] for refreshments: was there, with his boat's crew, made prisoners, confined in a dungeon, his vessel seized and dismantled, and his crew plundered and cruelly treated; and were finally released by the Governor-General of Chili, with no other apology for the outrage, than that the Americans were strongly suspected of aiding the revolutioners in South-America in their opposition against government.

It is added, that Mr. Havel, the American Consul General at St. Jago, (Chili) had been arrested, and sent a state prisoner to Juan Fernandez—the island celebrated for the long residence therein of Robinson Crusoe. And further, that Capt. Smith, of the Albatross, and Capt. Guyster, of the Leda—American vessels—had also been imprisoned several weeks, treated roughly, and afterwards liberated.

Portland:

Tuesday, April 22, 1817.

The U. S. brig Boxer, Capt. Porter, bound to the Gulf of Mexico dropped down and anchored at the watering place New-York on the 16th inst.

The Congress frigate, Captain Morris, sailed from New-Orleans on a cruise, about the 18th of March.

The death of Petion which is reported from Kingston, (Jamaica) is contradicted in the New-York Evening Post. Petion was alive and active in Port-au-Prince about the 20th of March, which is as late as the news from Kingston.

There are now published in the State of New-York, ninety newspapers—8 daily, 8 semi-weekly, and the rest weekly.

The account of inspection of wheat flour, in the city of Baltimore for the quarter ending the 31st of March, was 93,898 barrels, and 2,131 half barrels; rye ditto, 5,949 barrels.

The Academy in Connecticut, for the education of the deaf and dumb, was opened on Tuesday last.

In New-York, De Wit Clinton is the candidate for Governor.

CONNECTICUT ELECTION.

The result of the late election, was as unexpected to federalists, as it is believed to be unwelcome to a majority of the good people of this State. Majorities must and ought to govern in republics, and when fairly obtained, good citizens will acquiesce and submit to their determinations. But artificial majorities, such as are sometimes raised by deceitful appeals to the ignorance and prejudices of mankind; by exciting false alarms and visionary hopes; by addressing the selfishness of some, and the sectarian feelings of others; by flattering the ambition of the young, and cajoling the weakness of the aged;—such majorities ought not to command respect, and cannot long maintain their ascendancy in an enlightened community. Great is truth, and though obscured for a moment by the mist of passion and prejudice, it will most assuredly break forth and again illumine our political horizon.

In this view of the subject, we may look with an eye of hope and encouragement to the glorious example of our sister Massachusetts. There democracy, though boasting much more talents and liberality than she ever claimed here, was soon obliged to give up the ground which by her accustomed arts she once occupied. If her Dexters, Sullivans, Gerrys and Dearbons, with old John Adams and his son to help them, could not sustain democracy from sinking in Massachusetts—who can sustain her in Connecticut? It is indeed strange when democracy is going out of fashion every where else, that she should at length obtain a triumph here.—Conn. Journal.

RHODE-ISLAND.

The election of Governor and Members of assembly took place on Wednesday last. It is stated that Knight the democratic candidate has a plurality of about 60 votes, but that a large majority of federal representatives are elected.

Several murders have been committed by the Indians on the borders of East Florida, in Camden county, in retaliation for some attacks made upon them by a banditti who infest a part of Florida adjacent to Georgia.

A substitute for News.—Election being over and the affairs of Europe and indeed nearly the whole of this mundane sphere having assumed a peaceable attitude, so that but a comparatively small portion of the public papers are occupied with news, an opportunity is now afforded to men of leisure and science to disseminate in our columns the effusions of their fruitful imaginations—and thus contribute to the edification and amusement of the public.—Whatever may tend to shew vice her form, or virtue her own image, will find ready admission in our columns.—“A word to the wise” is better than a volume to the vulgar.

Two of her sons were lost on a bad vessel, at the time of the great earthquake, and 5 others were killed in an action fought by Ad. Koppel. She never was known to drink beer or spirits in her life.

At the palace of Blenheim, January 30, his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, aged 78.—He was the third Duke of this title; was eminent for almost every good work; and though the first Duke still deservedly retains the title of the “Great Duke of Marlborough,” the latter will long be remembered as the Good Duke of Marlborough.
